Rond About Town

Apparently a certain gentleman drew the attention of most of the ladies of the card club. Very few attended this week. The rest were undergoing a mild form of torture for the sake of beauty.

Two boys were noticed swinging on the school gate Tuesday evening about four o'clock. They apparently wished to meet a couple of the high school girls. Oh now boys, can't you wait 'til they get home?

When the cat's away the mice will play. This was demonstrated on Friday night in one of the houses on main street. Quite a noise could be heard coming from the building.

A little coupe was seen headed over the east crossing on Sunday. It hadn't yet returned by supper time. What was the matter? Could he have had car trouble? We wonder.

Agricultural Salvation

A few years ago a good deal was printed and heard in this country about the Danish co-operative movement and the system of rural education as practised in that little European country, the close tie which exists between Danish rural education and co-operation and the profound effect which this combination has exerted upon the economic and cultural life of the people of Denmark and particularly of the residents of the agricultural areas.

So much interest was evinced in the results of the tie-up between education and co-operation in Denmark that governmental authorities in this country a few years ago secured a great deal of data on the subject and this information was widely disseminated throughout the prairie provinces. In the course of a year or two farmers and others in this country became well posted on what has been and is being done in Denmark and the results on the welfare of the people of that country.

Generally speaking the information secured by the people of this country was favorably received by the farming community of Western Canada and while it was generally recognized the Danish systems of rural education and co-operative marketing of agricultural products could not be adopted in this country in toto, there were many who felt that some of the features of both could be made adaptable here, not only to the economic benefit of the agriculturist but also to the promotion of a better cultural life.

During the era of the great depression of the past eight or nine years the interest which had been aroused in this country in the two movements which have contributed so much to the material welfare and happiness of the Danish rural people appears to have dropped out of sight and that is to be regretted for there is much of value therein of which advantage might be taken in shaping the future course of the rural life of these prairies.

Undoubtedly this loss of interest can properly be attributed to the struggle which the farmers have had to wage during the past few years for their very existence. Agriculturists have had to wage warfare against a series of disasters of great magnitude, including drought, dust, rust and grasshoppers, forcing them to give undivided attention to intimate threats and problems and leaving them little opportunity or energy to prosecute researches further afield.

Should Consider Possibilities

With, it is to be hoped, a return to more nearly normal yields in 1939, the present might be an appropriate time to take stock of present day trends in Western Canadian agricultural industry in the hope of determining the course which should be shaped to ensure future development along sound and profitable lines.

It is to be expected that much thought will be given to this subject in the next year or two and while the problems of the present and future are under review some earnest consideration might well be given to the question of the application here of some of the Danish agricultural marketing policies and the Danish rural educational system which lies behind their co-operative system.

As pointed out in a recent article by A. Axelsen Drejer, Secretary to the Central Co-operative Committee of Denmark the co-operative movement occupies a prominent place in the world's general knowledge of Denmark and, as he further pointed out, the enormous growth in the production and marketing section of the movement in that country "is directly connected with the reorganization of farm production in the last quarter of the nineteenth century," when conditions made it necessary for the farmers of Denmark to turn their attention from cereal growing as the main basis of their industry to animal husbandry.

There is plenty of evidence to demonstrate that the agricultural and folk schools played a very important part in enabling the Danish farmers to face and successfully combat the debacle which threatened to overwhelm their industry and, what is of equal if not greater importance is the fact that these schools have made a tremendous contribution to the cultural welfare and happiness of the rural population of Denmark.

During the past thirty years about one-third of the agricultural youth of Denmark have taken courses at the agricultural schools and the folk high schools, the latter affording opportunities for adult education particularly designed for rural people and including in a wide cultural and practical curriculum some courses in agriculture.

When it is pointed out that there are approximately 60 of these folk high schools and some 22 agricultural schools catering to a rural population of about 1,400,000 it is not difficult to understand the profound influence these institutions have had and are having on the life of the people of the country districts.

Seeks Tax Exemption

C.B.C. Advances Claim That It Is Adjunct Of Crown

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in an assessment appeal filed in Toronto before Judge James Parker advanced the claim it is exempt from taxation on the ground it is an adjunct of the crown. Judge Parker reserved decision.

Counsel for the city of Toronto said only actual crown lands, not separately incorporated bodies such as the C.B.C., were exempt from taxation. The Canadian National Railways and other publicly-created bodies were taxed in Ontario.

John Jennings, appearing for C.B.C., said the tax exemption claim would be advanced right across Canada.

HEARTBURN KEPT HIM AWAKE

Afraid To Eat Square Meal

What a worry he must have been to his wife! No food agreed with him. Acid indigestion had him positively wretched. In this letter, his wife tells how he got welcome relief—

"My husband developed a wretched form of gastric acidity," she writes. "Meals were a misery to him. He often could not sleep for heartburn. Business kept him from home a great deal, but when he did get a spell at home, I gave him Kruschen Salts. I was amazed at the results. That weary look left his face, and his indigestion gradually disappeared. It is a treat to hear him say, 'I'm hungry.' It seems too good to be true." (Mrs.) K.M.E.

The numerous salts in Kruschen help to promote a natural flow of the digestive and other vital juices of the body. Soon after you start on Kruschen, you will find that you are able to enjoy your food without distressing after-effects. And as you persevere with this "little dose," you will see that Kruschen brings glorious relief.

Earliest Inhabitant

Evidence Of First Man On North

American Continent Found In Saskatchewan

Dr. Frank H. Roberts, archaeologist of the Smithsonian Institution, declared he had found evidence the Folsom man, earliest known inhabitant of North America, had roamed from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico.

Reporting on explorations during the past summer, Dr. Roberts said he found stone implements and arrow heads in Saskatchewan which showed work characteristic of that known to have been done by the Folsom man.

The Folsom man inhabited North America as early as 10,000 years ago, archaeologists claim. Prior to his Saskatchewan explorations, Dr. Roberts traced the Folsom man as far south as Texas and has received specimens dug up all the way from Colorado to the Atlantic seaboard.

Finding of the arrow and spear heads in Saskatchewan was particularly interesting, Dr. Roberts said, because they confirmed the belief the Folsom man, who lived in North America long before the Indians, was a gypsy-like nomad.

Explorations just carried out show the Folsom man lived during the era of early manhood in the North American camel and an extinct species of bison, the Smithsonian archaeologist reported. The Folsom man's stone implements were always discovered in close association with bones of the mammoth and other animals in the same geological strata.

Planning Reserve Force

Men To Be Trained By Royal Canadian Mounted Police

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police plans to train a number of reserves from among the staffs of large firms in several cities, it was announced at Ottawa by Deputy Commissioner Thomas Dunn.

The reserves will not be trained at Regina or Ottawa where the force already has a large number of trained men available.

One city where the scheme will be tried will be Winnipeg where men chosen from employees of a number of large companies will be drilled. The usual strict R.C.M.P. entrance requirements in regard to physical condition, weight and height will not be rigidly enforced.

The men, when trained, will constitute a reserve supply for any emergency the force may be called upon to face.

A Word For The Scot

Writer Pictures Scotland As A Fine Country In Which To Live

Not everybody in Scotland can eat porridge, drink whisky and wear the kilt. Porridge may be eaten, whisky may be drunk, and the kilt may be seen and worn, but there are other things.

Winter is not unduly cold in Scotland, in point of fact, over the greater part of Scotland winter temperatures are higher than they are in London. Except on high ground, snow and frost are rarities of brief duration. Palm trees flourish in the open air. The mean winter temperature in the Orkney Islands, to the north of the Scottish mainland, is about the same as that of Falmouth, in the south of England.

Scotland is not all mountains. The Highlands are only a part of the country. The Lowlands, too, are beautiful, and they excel in historical and romantic associations.

The Scots are not mean. They refrain from foolish extravagance, but their charities are magnificently endowed and generously maintained. The Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh, where doctors from over all the world are glad to study, is kept up by voluntary contributions.

The Scots have a sense of humor. It is not the same as the English sense of humor, but it is keen and lively.

Not all Scots are dour. Some are exceedingly volatile; their dances are as gay as any in Europe. Coming Events in Britain.

Larger School Units

Movement Is Being Carried On Vigorously In Alberta

Reports from the Department of Education at Edmonton indicate that the movement to establish large units for school administration is being carried on vigorously. Blocks of from 80 to 90 small districts are being united to form one large administrative area. So far 34 large units have been formed.

Considerable opposition has developed in many parts of the province to the big unit plan, largely based on the claims that school taxes will be increased and that local home rule will be eliminated. Proponents of the new system assert that rural education in its present setup is a scandal and that further progress is impossible until the small administrative unit disappears.

Two generations ago education was the parents' responsibility. After a long struggle the community assumed the care of the education of all children within its borders. Today it is being asserted that equal and adequate educational facilities can be provided only by enlarging the administrative areas to include a great number of communities—Calgary, Edmonton, and other cities.

Another Story For Ripley

Hunter, Claims He Bagged Ducks In Unusual Way

Here's the story that is being told—take it or leave it. A well-known young mired of Goderich, Ontario, went out hunting ducks and came to a field where there was a good sized flock of them. However, the ducks were settled in an open field with no covering by which the hunter could get close enough for a shot. The wily chap then resorted to strategy and his knowledge of wild life. Knowing the ducks unafraid of cattle, he corralled two calves in the field, some distance away from the birds, and placing an arm about the neck of each, led them close to the ducks. Thus hidden he was able to get within in close range of the game and he arrived back in Goderich with three ducks.

Putting raw meat on a black eye was an old Egyptian remedy.

All Pioneers Not Hardy Race They Are Pleured

There is a legend that the pioneers were a hale and hardy race, living to a good old age, and successfully raising families of a dozen or more. Apparently that wasn't true, as shown by the deaths commemorated in a booklet covering the period of 20 years from 1863 to 1883. The inscriptions cover 15 pages and 75 deaths. In two cases, the exact age is not mentioned, but the victims were little children. Apparently they were under 10.

Of the 75 deaths listed, 52 died under the age of 30 years, or more than two-thirds of the total. Twelve of the others were over 60 years of age. Only 11 out of the 75 died between the ages of 30 and 60. It appeared that those who lived to the age of 30 had a good chance of reaching a fair age, though only five reached the "allotted span" of 70 years.

Like To Obey

Women In New England Prefer Husbands Who Are Boss

The results of a test show that 59 per cent. of all American women object to the word "obey" in the marriage ceremony. But this is not the case in at least, Puritan old New England, where the condition is reversed and 55 per cent. of the women want husbands who will boss them around and make them mind. But, if a majority of American women object to obeying their husbands, the position is reversed when the male in the case is their boss. The survey shows 88 per cent. would rather work for a man than a woman.—Halifax Chronicle.

Seems Good Record

Dr. P. D. Ross is right when he suggests that $2,500,000,000 in Canada's chartered banks belonging to 4,000,000 depositors is a good record for a nation with something less than 12,000,000 people. It is, moreover, a sign that the financial troubles of a great many people exist only in imagination.

Jack caught the meaning. His lips became colorless.

"See here," he argued. "I'm not trying to stop you from working the way you see fit. Why shouldn't the rule work both ways? I'm paying the bills on this experiment of mine. No matter whose idea is right, we'll share and share alike."

"Um—humpf." McKenzie Joe rolled his tongue and stared far up the valley. "I knew another fellow like you, once, Jack. He got an idea that he had to go after things on a grand scale. First thing he knew all his money was gone. And he had to sell out."

"That's idiotic."

"So's your idea," said Joe bluntly. Hammond's eyes snapped.

"You're only saying that because you've got a prejudice against anything that's modern or sensible. All you want to do is keep everything the same, staggering around bloodfist!"

Heardly he swung down the step then and headed for the village. McKenzie Joe stared after him, a not unkindly light in his troubled eyes.

"Now I know I'm going over to Whoopee and get drunk," he mused at last.

For that matter, Hammond knew it too, and the knowledge helped considerably to cool his anger as he pounded along the trail toward his place. Getting drunk, with McKenzie Joe, was like a plague of locusts or a spring flood. Something disastrous always happened. At last, Jack turned from the trail and went into Jeanne's store for a tin of tobacco.

"You look worried," she said.

"I am. Joe has announced that he's going to get drunk Thursday night." "Well," she laughed, "he'll have plenty of company." Jeanne was much more buoyant these days. Lew Snade had not come again to Sapphire. In fact, Kenning had told Jack that the man had purchased one of several newly imported cars and gone down the lake, prospecting. Enough that he had departed, Jeanne went on. "You won't have to call out the reserves when Joe gets going?" Jack remained serious.

"It's really pretty terrible, Jeanne. Cracked heads and all that."

"But you're going to be with him—to see that he doesn't get hurt."

"I can't leave him—something always happens when I do."

Jeanne smiled.

"Maybe he'll fool you this time and be good."

"Here's hoping," Jack felt better now. Strangely, he always felt better after he had talked to Jeanne Towers. Yet he did not realize how often he needlessly dropped by this little store to buy tobacco when he had plenty, matches when his pockets were full, socks he did not intend to use. A week before, she had insisted on paying the partners for the original supplies which they had furnished her, only to go deeper in debt. It had been a secret loan from Jack. He had borrowed for $5,000, to be repaid out by airplane the next day and sent by express to The Pax. At least, the monetary weight of her past was off her conscience. Now she came forward, wistfully eager.

"Gee, it's good to see you smile again," she said. Then hesitantly, "You've helped me so much. I'd give anything if I could..."

There she halted and turned away. Jack's eyes followed her gaze, to sight the trim form of the approaching Kay Joyce.

"Oh, there you are," the Seattle girl exclaimed, with her usual easy command of spontaneity. "I've been looking for you."

Jack Hammond felt again the queer emotions which flooded him whenever these women met. As though he should explain Jeanne, extol her good qualities. It made him angry with himself; Jeanne needed no extolling and Kay had never made an outright move of enmity.

"It was just on the way down to the creek," Jack said. "I heard some shouting."

"Yes, Olson's made another strike," "Olson again?" Hammond turned to Jeanne. "Better put it in a new order." Then to Kay: "Olson practically buys out the store after every new strike." Kay covered her rejoinder with a disarming smile.

"I must learn how to handle these rich miners. You'll teach me some time, Miss Towers?"

Jack Hammond gasped. For Jeanne replied, with the same smiling pleasantness.

"Oh, we must exchange recipes." "Oh, gorgeous," Kay Joyce was equally unctuous. Then, "Jack, can you walk down to the creek with me?" Once away from the cabin: "You've simply got to help me out with this man Olson."

"What Olson?" "I thought he was after your mother."

"She's after him, you mean. It's sickening. Now I've been run into it. He wants to give a big dinner to celebrate this strike."

"Well?"

"I simply can't sit through a party like that. You've got to get me out of it—tell him that we're going for an airplane ride, anything. It's to be Fourth of July night."

"What time?"

"Seven o'clock."

"Thanks for that! I was afraid it would be later. I've got to be away by ten. I've promised to be with McKenzie Joe. It's something I can't break. I simply can't. You'll let me go by ten?"

It was with a bit of pique that she said good-by to him the night of Olson's party. Hammond almost ran from the cottage to his cabin. Joe already was dressing, a funeral procedure.

He pawed at the buttoning of his collar, stretching his neck dolefully as he strove to accustom it to its confines. He peered into the crinkly mirror and tied his blue tie with its red polka dots for a third and a fourth time. He took his old hat to the door and brushed it meticulously; he had forgotten to order a new one. He rubbed another dose of bear grease on his boots. And gave up on his electric blue coat, and gave a hitch to his electric blue trousers with their unpressed bow wrinkles at the knees. Then he walked dolefully to the door.

"Ready?" he asked Jack.

There was quite a crowd in front of the dance hall when they arrived.

Why? At intervals a bomb hurtled from a mortar into the air and exploded with a detonation which threw itself from mountain peak to mountain peak in seemingly ceaseless echoes.

Around the World Annie, resplendent in a dress of star-spangled tulle, topped by a blue-and-white tircorn, trimmed with a red cockade, was vociferously greeting all comers.

"Liberty frightening 'til' world!" she shouted. "Ray for Whoopee!" "Whoopee yourself!" shouted a miner.

"Took the words out of my mouth," answered Annie, with a merry little grin. "Whoopee for you."

Whoopee for me. Whoopee for Alaska!

After a time they went inside. An orchestra began to play, violin, clarinets, trombone, cornet and accordion, imported by air from Juneau. As if from nowhere, girls appeared, smiling sweetly toward the incoming miners. One of them, Florine, arms half extended, as if for dancing, placed herself directly in the path of McKenzie Joe.

He did not evade her. He did not brush her aside. He merely put out a hand and with a mournful, shuffling motion, moved her out of his way. Straight onward he went, to the bar, and while Jack strove vainly to restrain him, ordered Scotch.

Then, disdaining the whisky glass, he raised the bottle—a cork, in a Canadian parlance—in a big hand.

For a long moment he eyed it. His beaverlike eyes circled under heavy brows. Then he raised the big bottle to his lips and allowed it to gurgie until Jack gasped, from the mere agony of watching.

CHAPTER VIII.

An hour later, Jack Hammond searched the crowded dance hall in vain. All in a moment, he had lost McKenzie Joe, and this was a bad time to lose him.

Evidences of McKenzie's activities, however, were glaringly present. A window stood gaping at the grayling dusk; darkness did not come now until after midnight. A bottle had broken the pane and Joe had thrown it as a grand finale for the fireworks exhibit. There also were broken chairs, crushed to bits by McKenzie's tremendously strong hands, to the cheers of the mob. Joe had not joined in the enthusiasm—even that of Around the World Annie, who was charging 100 per cent. profit on all breakage. True, he had lost some of his funeral air and his lips bore a hint of a smile, like a polar bear.

That is, the smile had been there when Jack last had seen him, with his hat on sideways, his electric blue suit badly disheveled, and his course in life a vague, wandering one, in which he sometimes walked flat into a wall without realizing it—until he bumped his nose. Then, solemnly, he would turn, blankly survey his surroundings, and begin another aimless excursion.

It had been during one of these sorties that Jack had lost his partner. One moment Joe had been steering straight for the middle of the dance floor, only suddenly to disappear as a surging mass of leg-flicking miners and their girls cut him off from the pursuing Hammond.

For instant ease from chest colds, ordinary sore throats.

RUB ON MINARD'S GREAT CANADIAN RUBBING LINIMENT

Many persons wonder why oratory has become a lost art. There is no reason for this wonder. Great oratory comes out of great depth of feeling, and our contemporaries feel less deeply than their ancestors did.

By the time Jack had fought his way through the tangled mob, McKenzie Joe was gone. Now the younger partner-tough hit him in the arm, at last going to the gambling hall.

Here the crowd was even thicker. Throngs were jammed around the rails of the crap games; the clatter of the dice was continuous with the draw of the keeper.

Spaced at intervals were the intricate intracies of faro, each game with its dealer, leonically fingering the cards from their wooden box, its frozen faced lookout, high on his long-legged stool, his green eye shade and his dead cigar each drooping at a similar angle, its never restful case-keeper, with his counting board, recording the cards as they came forth.

Here too was the glitter of the "big wheels," glinting with a maze of electric lamps, charged by the establishment. Around the World Annie's table for a gasoline motor light plant, which had formed an entire load for Timmy Moon's plane. The stud games also were busy, slot machines, the blackjack games and the enthralling click of the ivory ball as it rounded the roulette wheel. Hammond turned in that direction. He had sighted Bruce Kenning.

He was careless, his collar loosened. Slightly drunk, he stood sweating at the board, his left hand incessantly riffling the pile of chips before him, his right, stabbing outward, to place his bets, a four-way wager here, a straight bet there, a hedge on the Double O. A look of surprise came into Hammond's eyes as he neared the man; there was terrific concentration about him, an air of obliviousness to everything save the lay-down board and the dizzy spin of the multi-colored wheel.

Organization Prosperous

Alberta Wheat Pool Was Founded Fifteen Years Ago

In the autumn of life, Henry Wood, the stalwart Lincolnshire figure who for three decades championed the cause of the Alberta farmer, had a fond memory on October 29—the memory of an agrarian association founded as the first of its kind in Canada.

It is the Alberta Wheat Pool which on that date was 15 years old—a memorable date in the mind of Alberta's grand old man of agriculture.

Henry Wood was its first president, a post he held for years. Co-operative marketing agency for thousands of Alberta farmers, the Wheat Pool started operations Oct. 29, 1923.

No longer a compulsory organization as in the days of its infancy when 25,000 farmer-members by virtue of contract were signed to market all their wheat with the pool, the co-operative to-day operates 400 country elevators and large terminal houses at the port of Vancouver.

Any farmer can market with the pool now and this year from Alberta's great wheat crop of 140,000,000 bushels, millions of bushels have rolled into pool elevators for transportation to the Pacific Coast.

From his farm home at Carstairs, Mr. Wood who is 77 years old, watches in retirement the activities of the marketing agency. On his retirement from the board chairmanship last year, he was made honorary president and an annual life honorarium created for him.

To-day Lew Hutchinson, a member of the first executive in 1923, is the head man at the pool headquarters in Calgary. He is chairman of the board and with him is R. D. Purdy, first general manager who came from Edmonton 15 years ago to open the headquarters office there.

A year after the establishment of the Alberta Pool, similar pools were formed in Saskatchewan and Manitoba and a central selling agency—The Canadian Wheat Pool—organized.

In the first year of operation the Alberta Pool had a membership of 25,719 with a total of 2,336,300 acres under contract. The compulsory contract was discontinued several years ago.

Many Will Admit Few Medical Specialists From Europe

Of the scores of professional men in central Europe seeking to enter Canada a few specialists in the medical profession and some particularly qualified chemists will likely be admitted, it was learned at Ottawa.

Immigration officials take the view Canada has a surplus of physicians already and therefore they are generally recommending against admitting medical men from Germany, Austria, Italy, Poland and other countries of central Europe.

Most of the applications are from Jewish doctors and include those from territories now in the Reich and adjacent countries where their positions are felt to be insecure.

One factor that makes the problem difficult is the coming of the certain districts in the prairies that they have not adequate medical services. From several of these districts have come pleas that central European doctors be admitted to go to such localities.

Immigration figures show immigration to Canada from the central European countries increased in the six months ended September 30, compared with the same period in 1937.

The importance of salt as a medium of exchange was mentioned by Marco Polo in his report on the financial system of the Mongolian emperors in his time.

One discovery made by stratosphere flights is that the air at such heights, although much rarer than that near the ground, contains about the same percentage of oxygen.

PEACE IS ALL WE ASK

In the autumn when the leaves are brown
All feathered friends have flown away,
And ripening fields are fast cut down,
'Tis then the world looks grey.
It needs us then to cheer the morn
With happy songs and grateful words,
Life seems to have so many thorns,
We must be glad, think not of swords
Let's bow our heads and bless those boys
Who fought and died for God and us;
And make in Life some simple joys
For war hangs on us like a truce.
PEACE! be our motto to the world
Then flags and shells shall ne'er be hurled.

Composed by Mrs. F. Morrell, Chinook.
